

Is the West in danger of being loved to death?

Cecil D. Andrus, 1998

Environmental Conference

TUESDAY, APRIL 18, 2023
7:30 AM - 6:00 PM MDT

RE-CREATING PUBLIC LAND RECREATION

The 2023 Andrus Center Environmental Conference will focus on recreation and public lands with an eye towards resolving tensions and furthering best practices. This conference will be held in-person and broadcast live virtually on Tuesday, April 18th.

This full-day conference will present an opportunity to consider both local successes including the Boise Foothills and to examine complexity in a larger regional context. We will prioritize how public land agencies are adjusting to meet the growing demands of the public for recreation and consider the social, economic, and ecological impacts of mass recreation.

Discounted student tickets available.

HTTPS://WWW.ANRUSCENTER.ORG

$85

ABOUT THE ANDRUS CENTER FOR PUBLIC POLICY

Named for Cecil D. Andrus, Idaho's only four-term Governor and former Secretary of the U. S. Department of the Interior, the Andrus Center advances Andrus' legacy issues — wise use of our environmental resources, proper funding of education for our children and the cultivation of leadership from all segments of our society. The Andrus Center is a nonprofit organization supported by donors and volunteers.

QUESTIONS:
ANDRUS@BOISESTATE.EDU

Sponsorship opportunities available